MACARTNEY WELBORN, MD

Dermatopathologist and Board-Certified Dermatologist

Dr. Macartney Welborn is a dermatopathologist and a board-certified dermatologist. She completed her undergraduate studies at Southern Methodist University, graduating Summa Cum Laude with a double major in Biology and Chemistry. Dr. Welborn earned her medical degree and completed her internship at the University of Texas Health Science Center at Houston. She then pursued her dermatology residency at the University of Florida where she served as Chief Resident from 2022-2023, and further specialized in dermatopathology through a fellowship also at the University of Florida.

Dr. Welborn has extensive research experience, with contributions to numerous journal publications, book chapters, abstracts, and presentations. Her peers have recognized her commitment to patient care and excellence in practice by electing her twice to the Gold Humanism Honor Society as a medical student and again as a resident physician. Throughout her training, she has held significant roles, including participation in the Dialogues in Dermatology Podcast and directing the University of Florida Equal Access Clinic for uninsured patients.

Dr. Welborn's practice philosophy emphasizes the importance of effective communication with providers and the integration of clinical and pathological findings to ensure accurate diagnoses and optimal patient care. Her dedication to advancing dermatologic medicine through research and community service underscores her value as a member of the Sagis team.
